Leonard and Hungry Paul Ronan Hession were two of the most influential Irish artists of the 20th century. Their work spanned a wide range of styles, from abstract expressionism to surrealism, and they were both instrumental in shaping the Irish art scene.

Leonard was born in Dublin in 1914. He studied art at the National College of Art and Design, where he met Hungry Paul. The two artists quickly became friends and collaborators, and they began exhibiting their work together in the early 1940s.

Hungry Paul was born in Belfast in 1918. He studied art at the Belfast College of Art, where he developed a strong interest in surrealism. He was also influenced by the work of the Irish writer James Joyce, and his paintings often featured dreamlike and mythological imagery.

Leonard and Hungry Paul's work was often controversial, but it was also highly acclaimed. They were both awarded the prestigious Irish Arts Council's Lifetime Achievement Award, and their work is represented in major museums around the world.

Leonard's Work

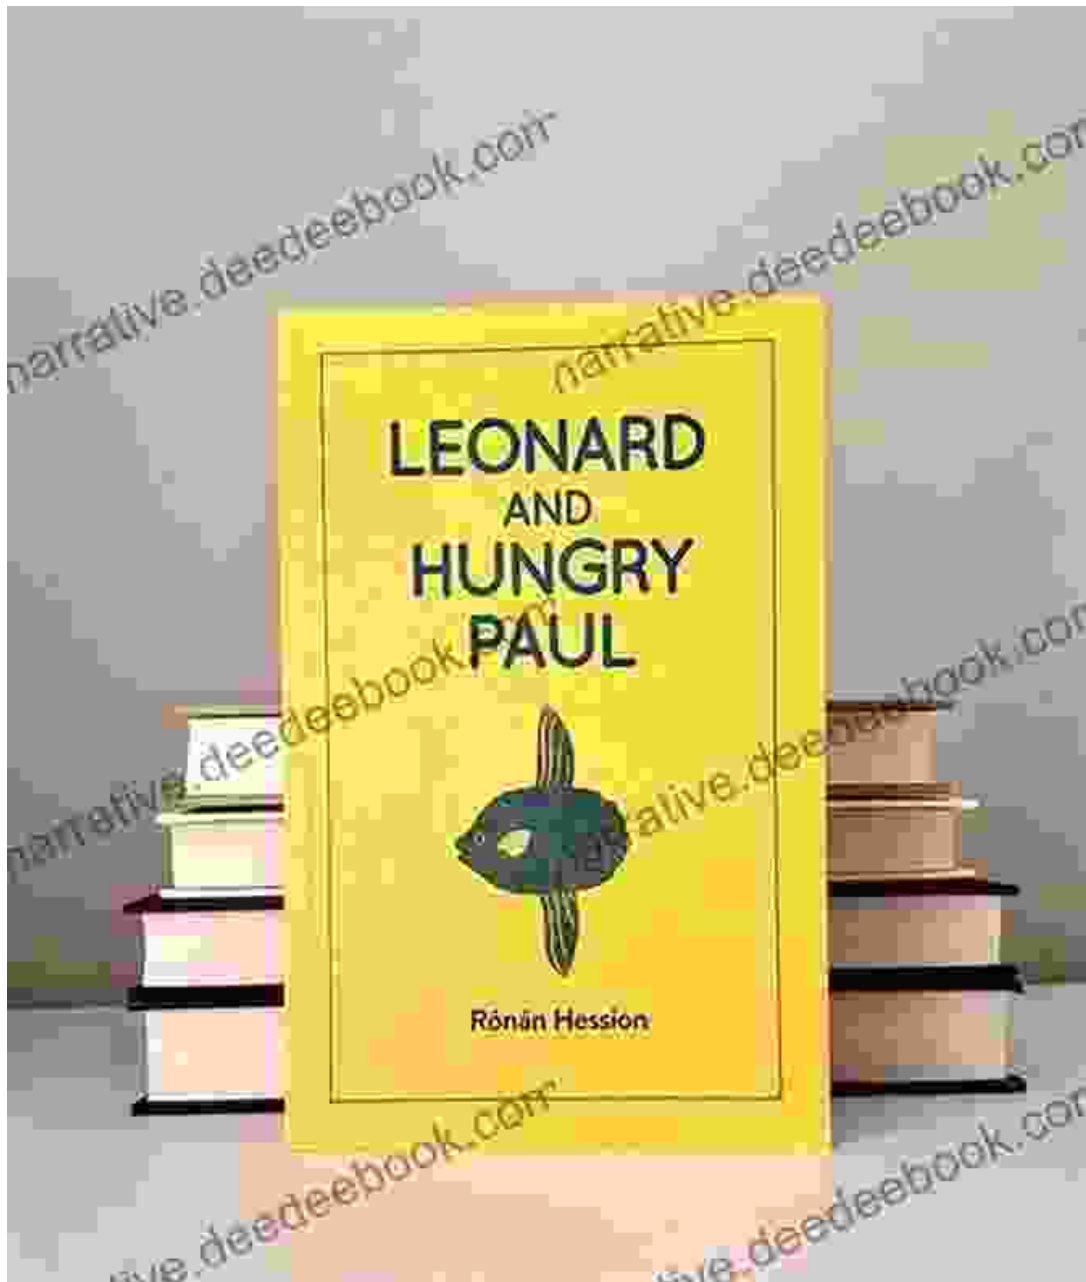

Leonard's work was characterized by its abstract expressionist style. He used bold colors and gestural brushstrokes to create paintings that were both visually striking and emotionally evocative.

Leonard was also a gifted printmaker, and he produced a number of limited-edition prints that are highly sought-after by collectors. His prints often featured the same abstract motifs as his paintings, but they were also notable for their use of experimental techniques, such as collage and monoprinting.

Hungry Paul's Work

Hungry Paul's work was more surrealist in style. He often used dreamlike imagery and symbolism to create paintings that were both haunting and beautiful.

Hungry Paul was also a skilled draftsman, and his paintings often featured intricate details. He was also a master of color, and his paintings were often characterized by their rich, vibrant hues.

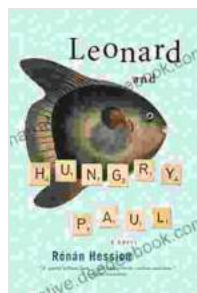

Legacy

Leonard and Hungry Paul Ronan Hession were two of the most important Irish artists of the 20th century. Their work helped to shape the Irish art scene, and it continues to inspire artists today.

Leonard died in 1999, and Hungry Paul died in 2005. But their work lives on, and it continues to be celebrated by art lovers around the world.
